

exploring

2,884 meters

Mountains are not a homogenous group of rocky geological formations but ecosystems with a wide variety of fauna and flora, influenced by a plethora of different microclimates. Truth to be told, mountains are worlds of their own. However, we ought to acknowledge the similarities in their beginnings in order to kick off our journey of discovery.