

coexisting

Many people in the world live in the mountains. However, they are remote areas with strategic interests which can make it difficult for populations to subsist and coexist, as they are more vulnerable to unemployment, conflicts, poverty and lack of human and material resources.